What's in a Name? The story behind Victor & Paramvir

I have often been asked did I change my name after I moved to the US, the answer is no I did not change my name. Victor is my original name and here is the story behind it -

My parents named me Victor because on the day I was born India defeated Pakistan 1-0 in the Tokyo Olympic Games to win her 7th Olympic Hockey Gold Medal. The victory was very sweet and important to India because Pakistan had defeated India 1-0 in the 1960 Olympics final game ending India's dominance in the sport. Before that loss, between 1928 and 1956 India had won six Olympic gold medals, they were undefeated in 30 consecutive games, scoring 197 goals giving away only 8. So the 1964 victory was especially sweet, the nation was jubilant and my parents, caught up in the moment, were very happy as well -- hence the name Victor.

Here's what my elder brother had to say about this: "we were in our Landmaster on Mathura Road (in Delhi) having just passed the Lodi Road Crossing in New Delhi, when we decided on the name Victor because the news of India having won the hockey olympic medal was all over the radio and people were very happy. We were already very excited about the new addition to the family and had been thinking hard about the name when we heard of this great victory and so immediately decided to call Victor 'Victor'.

I officially became Paramvir when my parents went to register me in Modern School, I was around 6 years old. While filling in the form the registrar commented that I had a very western name. My parents reacted by changing it to "Param Vir". For years my mother wrote it as such but in time I removed the space between m and v and it became Paramvir.

Param means highest and Vir means brave (warrior), put together Param Vir means "Bravest of the Brave" in Hindi. The PVC or Param Vir Chakra is India's highest military decoration awarded for the highest degree of valor or self-sacrifice in the presence of the enemy. It is similar to the British Victoria Cross, US Medal of Honor, French Legion of Honor, and Russian Cross of St. George.

Notice, Victor is part of Victoria Cross; Paramvir is part of Param Vir Chakra; and the British Victoria Cross is equivalent to India's Param Vir Chakra. This connection was probably very real for my parents who had grown up in pre-independent India, under the British Raj.

So Paramvir and Victor are pretty close. These days I use them interchangeably, most of my award certificates have Victor Bahl on them and almost all my scientific publications and patents have Paramvir Bahl on it. For those who do not know me this causes a bit of confusion but I have come to accept and even enjoy it. I respond to both names and like them both, you can use the one that you like better.
